

Water
is Life

Here in the Central Valley, there is no resource more vital than water. We need it in our daily lives to cook, clean, wash and drink. As the source of life for our families, the environment and the world around us, we need to ensure that this valuable resource is preserved.

The Central Valley Water Awareness Committee is working hard to be the steward of the one thing that we depend on most ... water.

Who we are

The Central Valley Water Awareness Committee (CVWAC) is comprised of numerous public agencies and private companies that work to provide the Valley with safe and reliable water while encouraging sound water conservation and pollution prevention practices for everyone.

What we do

Members of CVWAC employ various techniques in their efforts to monitor, conserve and protect the Valley's water resources. However, our greatest efforts focus on education and outreach. Through literature, activities, events and personal speakers, CVWAC strives to educate the public on important water issues. From agriculture and urban water use to water conservation and delivery, CVWAC is the Valley's resource for water issues.
